"Father, who travels our road so late?"
"Hush my child, 'tis the candidate! Fit example of human woes,
Early he comes, and late he goes;
He greets the woman with courtly grace;
He kisses the baby's dirty face;
He calls to the fence the farmer at work;
He bores the merchant, he bothers the clerk;
The blacksmith, while his anvil rings, He greets; and this is the song he sings: 'Howdy, howdy, how d'ye do?
How is your wife, and how are you?
Ah it fits my fist as no other can
The horny hand of the working man.'"

"Husband, who is that at the gate!" "Hide my love, 'tis the candidate!"
"Husband, why can't he work like you? Has he nothing at all at home to do? "My dear, whenever a man is down, No cash at home and no credit in town, Too plain to preach and too proud to beg, Too timid to rob and too lazy to dig, Then over his horse his legs he flings,

And to the dear people this song he sings:
'Howdy, howdy, how d'ye do?
How is your wife, and how are you?
Ah, it fits my fist as no other can,
The horny hand of the working man.'"

Brothers who labor early and late, Ask these things of the candidate; What is his record? How does he stand At home? No matter about his hand, Be it hard or soft, so it be not prone To close over money not his own.

He has in view no thieving plan?

Is he honest and capable?—he's your man Cheer such a one till the welkin rings; Join in the chorus when thus he sings: "Howdy, howdy, how d'ye do?
How is your wife, and how are you?
Ah, it fits my fist as no one can,
The honest hand of the working man."

"LOVE POWDERS."

An Imposition that Thrives Upon the Sickly Sentimentality of the Women. From the New York Evening Post.

Ours is supposed to be an age of enness, who never grow visionary in the matter of an investment, sometimes carry buckeyes in their trousers pockets as a cure for rheumatism, or lucky-bones to keep off ill-fortune and bankruptcy. Every quack in the land does a thriving business, trading upon the insane credulity of sane men and women, and if some charlatan should advertise pactolian water at a dollar a pint, he would draw money remittances even from Wall street, in all probability. The only wonder is that no shrewd swindler has made the experiment.

Mr. Anthony Comstock has recently made some arrests among the quacks who advertise love powders for sale at uncommonly high prices, and his discoveries are painfully interesting. The transparent absurdity of the pretense upon which these male and female swindlers trade is not sufficient, it appears, to protect even young women who have been brought up in intelligent families and educated in good schools from falling victims to them. They read advertisements in which some man or woman offers for sale certain drugs, which, it is The young women know, of course, that this must be a lie, in the very nature of and are not to be acted upon by material the compounding of drugs or more learned in their properties than men of scientific attainments are; and they know that evident falsehoods, and send money to them, and get powder, which, in utter ignorance of the chemical nature of the drug they give, they surreptitiously administer to some young man, refusing to reflect that if a drug given openly will not produce a certain effect, its secret administration cannot in the least change either its nature or its influence.

Two, at least, of the letters which Mr. Comstock secured were from young women of this city and Brooklyn who ought to have known better, and there is here a lesson for parents. It is not difficult to guess what sort of literature those young women have been accustomed to read .-The symptoms of arsenical poison are not more certain than are those which manifest themselves in such cases as these, of poisoning done to the intellect by unwholesome literature of the sentimental kind. These young women have been allowed to grow morbid over sentimental romances, and their condition is as truly one of mental disease as is that of the veriest lunatic at Bloomingdale. The recklessness with which parents and marriage are. On no other subject Winter grazing. There should be an whatever is it more important that young acre or two of the richest lots about every persons of both sexes should have sound, sensible, wholesome views; on no other are unsound, senseless and unwholesome notions more generally prevalent, and upon no other is there so much sickly nonsense written and printed. Every wife learns, if she does not know it before marriage, that good, sweet bread is more potent than any love powder to retain the affection of a man, and that a tidy house, a neat person and a cheerful face are more winning in a woman than any magical charm can be. The pity is that these truths are not always impressed upon the minds of maidens, and that sickly sentimentality is permitted to fasten itself there instead.

A BAD RULE THAT WON'T WORK BOTH WAYS .- Tom Hamilton, of Beaufort, an independent colored rice planter, one of the most liberal of the centennial legislators and a recent delegate from Beaufort to the Republican Convention, in a conversation a day or two ago said, in reference to the proposed plan of discharging employees who vote against the interests of their employers, that he considered and a complete the considered and the sidered such a course fair and square. He said he knew it was done at the North in large factories and with the tenantry of England, and, more to the point, he expected every man employed by him on his rice fields to vote with him, and if they did not, he would get men who would. Hamilton is a regular Republican, was the man who nominated Chamberlain in the convention, and a man of considerable influence in Beaufort

The Abuse of Titles.

The Augusta Chronicle and Sentinel the indiscriminate custom of affixing titles to public men:

Nearly every person one meets in the street now-a-days is a Colonel, and the rest are Judges and Generals. In the South we are greatly given to clapping titles to persons' names and John Phone titles to persons' names, and John Phœ-nix's Western joke of the man who, when leaving a crowd of strangers on a steamboat wharf, by calling out "good-bye, Colonel," received a volley of "take care of yourself, ole fel," is peculiarly appropriate to this section. The practice has been carried to such an extent here since the war that sensible men, really having a right to a title, have grown disgusted and begged to let it be dropped. Notably, General Breckenridge, when trying bly, General Breckenridge, when trying a cause at Lexington, after his return from Europe, requested a brother lawyer, who spoke of him as "General," to call him simply "Ar. Breckenridge." If titles were confined to those who had some right to them, or if the right titles were given, it would be bad enough, for in this country so many men have held office of some description that the streets of every city are filled with military heroes and civic dignitaries. But bad as that is it is infinitely worse when we reflect that fully half the men who respond the turtle, in which he says: A turtle is not so frisky as a man, but he can stand the army and that nine-tenths of the "Judges" were never on the bench. Men | squalling. are even promoted regularly as if regular men starting among us plain Mister who rose by regular graduation to be Cap-tains, Majors and Colonels! Every man who is at all prominent at the bar is a Judge, every man who runs for any office no matter how insignificant is Honorable, and every man in any walk of life at all well known is Colonel. A man who once has a title always has a title. It clings to him like a burr to a sheep's wool, and there is no getting rid of it, no matter how annoying or inappropriate it may be. On the other hand occasionally Ours is supposed to be an age of enlightenment, and we are accustomed to look with something like contemptuous pity upon the superstitions of our forefathers, confident that we never should have reasoned so illogically as they did; but there is reason to believe that superstitions of the absurdest sortare as common now as they ever were, the difference between us and our grandfathers lying chiefly in our smaller readiness to proclaim our belief in charms, and our faith in portents. Hard-headed men of business, who never grow visionary in the a man misses a title justly his due, and say how sheep will thrive on it, and how convenient a help it is for ewes after the lambs begin to come. Poultry of all kinds will pick up a deal of flesh and fat from the barley paich, and the best Christmas turkeys in the world are those taken fresh from a range in which they have green barley to pick. The yellow fat will lie in wads on the breast and under the wings, and the memory of i.3

ich less and flavor may be cherished for weeks after. By all means sow a barley paich in rich land. But do not pasture it in wet, rainy days, because the soil and the crop will be greatly damaged by the tramping .- Exchange.

Manners in Church.

Good manners in church require reverence in behavior, and hence we must exclude ordinary conversation both before and during and immediately after the services. Chatting, whispering, motioning—all such conduct is out of place where people have come together to engage in the most solemn act of which alleged, if administered surreptiously, they are capable. What a spectacle for will make the person to whom they are given love the person who gives them. people in their worship, to be witnesses of the animated tattle of two worshippers, who should be subdued into awe at the the case. They know, or they ought to thought of being in the presence of God! know, that the affections are not material I have sometimes taken my seat in conand are not to be acted upon by material agents. They know that these advertising quacks cannot be better skilled in the church audible throughout, a continuous contraction of the church audible throughout, a contraction of the church audible throughout a contraction of the church and the church action of the church audible throughout a contraction of the church audible throughout a church fused buzz, which made me feel that I be deficient in judgment, was asked by a had not come to worship God, but merely Professor, in the course of a class examito be entertained for an hour. As for quacks are necessarily persons of bad character, swindlers, cheats; and yet they believe their transparent and self-it is wicked. At the conclusion of worth ship I would not have friends debarred a recognition of each other in a quiet way especially is it admissible thus to notice stranger who may chance to be near but an immediate entering into general hand shakings and hilarious conversation must go far toward stifling the devout impressions which may have been in-pired during worship. It is also in bad taste to make the church the place for the show of fine clothes. There may be occasions when t is suitable to put on the costlicst and richest dress which the means and the conscience will allow; but to make the louse of prayer a scene for the exhibition of the latest fashions, and thus to appear before God, is out of all character. The plainest raiment which is in keeping with the usual habit of a person is most consistent with the gravity of religious worship. Thoroughly refined people are always averse to making a display of themselves. True worth craves neutral tints. Least of all do well-cultured persons wish to draw the gaze of a congregation to them-elves, when they and others permit their children thus to poison and are met for the serious matter of religious debauch their minds is a crying evil of instruction and devotion. and provide for a patch of barley for homestead sown for this purpose. Break up the land thoroughly and make it as rich as possible. Put on all the stable manure to be had and then add 200 to 400 pounds of good commercial manure. Sow after the middle of September, and begin to pasture on it in December. It may be used freely till March 1st; then, if the stock are withdrawn, it will make from 40 to 60 bushels of seed per acre, or may be cut for green feed just before and after it heads out. One acre will furnish liberal daily food for soiling eight or ten head of cows or mules, and still leave we know of one or two men who received most flattering promotion in the army vet who have escaped any military prefix in civil life. But these are shining exceptions to the general rule. So preva-lent has become the habit of bestowing titles that it is no unusual thing for two gentlemen when introduced to accost each other as Colonel. If the stranger shows age and is known to be a lawyer he is probably saluted as Judge. Astute politicians take advantage of the prevailing mania and have no acquintances below the grade of Judge or Colonel. The custom has become an intolerable nuisance and exposes the Southern people to the ridicule of educated and refined strangers who travel in this section. Can nothing be done to abate it? As we have societies for the promotion of temperance, societies for the prevention of cruelty to animals, and societies for the suppression of vice, can we not have in each community a society for the sup-pression of titles? Jan 6, 1876 25 Van Winkle's Improved Patent Cotton Cleaner and

THIS Machine has received the highest premiums wherever exhibited, and consided by all as indispensable to any one ginning cotton. It saves a hand, (the feeder,) which will pay its cost the first season. It takes out all rocks, nails, and any hard substance, thereby saving the gin, and a protection against fire. It cleans the cotton, which makes a better sample, and it keeps a perfect roll, and the gin can clean the seed closer. It suits any make of gins, and can be attached in ten minutes. A pully is sent to attach on the gin for the driver. This attachment will more than twice save its attachment will more than twice save its price in one season. Price, $1.25 per saw, according to size of gin.
